Transformation of the port of Hamburg from 1992 to 2012. Hamburg today is the largest port in Germany and one of the largest in Europe. If we look back at the period from 1992 to 2012, the port of Hamburg has undergone a whole series of major changes. The biggest challenge has undoubtedly been posed by the fact that the port of Hamburg is now the location of the largest container port in the world. To date, the largest container port in the world is the port of New York. In contrast, the port of Hamburg is the world's most important export hub and one of the largest export hubs in the world. And, as a result, there are currently around 10 million tons of cargo passing through the port of Hamburg every year. Port Simulator 2012 Hamburg. Starting in 2006, both major ports have received an overhauled, more efficient transport logistics, so that the environment-friendly transport of goods has been put in place at the ports of Hamburg. Port Simulator 2012 Hamburg: Another milestone in the development of the port of Hamburg was the inauguration of the terminal building on the green water-side port area of Hamburg in March 2012. This terminal building is the world's second-largest building, after the CN Tower in Toronto. Built in an early modern and innovative design, the terminal building and its four platforms have a height of more than fifty meters. These are the highest artificial islands in the world. In addition, the terminal building has built-in parking for a total of 4,500 cars and a total area of 140,000 square meters. Port Simulator 2012 Hamburg:

And for many years, the port of Hamburg has been known for its innovative solutions in the environmental sphere.

Examples include the conversion of the terminal building by the energy supplier Enron, the plant-based energy production of the port, the purification of wastewater in the port areas of Hamburg, the efficient recycling of waste, and, of course, the electrification of several port areas.
