From the developer: "Dungreed is a little FPS that consists of five levels, each made out of five different environmental objects. Each level is meant to be played as a gameplay tutorial on how to play the game, giving the player essential game skills. During a demo of the game, I was told that a lot of my skillful play, especially in the later levels, had nothing to do with mechanics and everything to do with trial and error, often spending several minutes trying to get around a certain obstacle. It seems that the idea is to create a game that isn't just fun to play, but a valuable game teaching experience. The game has been made for the Ludum Dare 2011 with the theme 'Novelty Game'. The game was made for the jam and while it was fun to play, it's also meant to be a learning experience. If you like this kind of game and want a shorter and lighter experience, you'll probably like this game."
