I have removed the bottom panel where the ink is and the first section of the cart. I have already started a video detailing this process. However, I am now looking at possibly replacing the cartridges. The current cartridges I have are the "16 pk." -- 3 red and 3 black. When I take the cartridges out of the printer, there is a small well on each side with a circular disc that I assume is a filter that prevents the ink from flowing back into the cartridge. If I can see that hole when I take the cartridge out, I should be able to replace it with a slightly smaller one. Is this something that needs to be done when I print? What size cartridge should I use, assuming I am not going to use the bluetronics ink that came with the printer? Also, I am having a hard time finding replacement cartridges for these printers. The Century cartridge for the 8100 printer is the closest thing I can find. I am currently using the cartridges that came with the printer. Thanks. _____ Why is the sky blue? Because blue things reflect everything but green things absorb everything. Should I put a filter in before removing the cartridge to protect the area? If you remove the cartridge, you will want to ensure that no ink gets into the well or the print mechanism. Even after printing, there will still be some ink left in the well (so don't touch it, touch it and you'll really get ink on you). If you don't want to get ink in the print mechanism, you need to take the cartridge out carefully (by hand, not with a tool) and then clean it. I do that by holding it with one hand, and with a toothbrush or similar cleaning tool, carefully brush the filter away. It helps to hold the cartridge at the top with the bottom open
