Dementia care in New Zealand has historically been organised through individual silos of health and social services. This article critically questions whether this unidirectional approach to care is valuable and sustainable. A person-centered approach to dementia is proposed to ensure patients and their carers receive care that is suited to their situation and preferences, and thus can achieve a better quality of life. Four approaches are suggested which could promote a person-centered approach: recognizing that the demented patient is one person; taking care of the person rather than the disease; considering the symptom rather than the disease; and strengthening the information, skills and knowledge of all health and social professionals.It's official: Microsoft Teams is now available to everyone
Sometime between that dreaded day you received Office 365's April update and now, Microsoft Teams is now available to everyone, regardless of their previous status within the service. The platform was launched back in April of 2017, which means it's been less than two years. Now it

April 23, 2017 I have a ROM game with the following names: R. From Clipper Vision: The best looking game from the NES era comes to you in a brand new Clipper Vision release called Clipper valkyrie. Five years after it's NES release, over three years after the release of the Game Boy and Sega Genesis versions, this is the very first and very first time this game has been playable with a real playable opponent! I'm giving this a 5 rating because ClipperVision has a ton of work in the making with this game. The picture quality is excellent. The sound is great. It even looks like the game is running on better hardware than the other NES games. However, the biggest selling point is the fact this is an opponent. The opponent works great. It's like playing another NES NES game with an opponent. From one perspective it feels just like playing Contra, but from another it feels like playing Super Rugby or Extreme Dodgeball. The opponent is pretty good as well. You can actually play against the opponent and earn money and items. You get really good at the game, but earn all the money and all the items that other versions of Clipper Vision games earned. The controls are good enough to play and win, as well as do well. It's easy to learn how to play and beat the opponent. Controls are easy to master. There are also two difficulty settings. The double digit coin and power up bonuses are awesome. They are super easy to earn. Actually, it's an easy game. Even after five years this game hasn't gotten any worse in terms of how easy it is to play. It is easier than Easy on Contra III, but it's still pretty easy. The opponent's scoring is fair and the game feels balanced. The scores that both teams get should be the same. Sometimes it gets a little annoying when you spend tons of lives and earn lots of money, and your opponent scores more than you. There's no penalty. If I beat you I still get my money and items. I'm seriously rating it 5 because Clipper Vision has a ton of work making this game happen. It's looking really good, and Clipper Vision should be happy they made the choice to do this. Five stars to Clipper Vision for this game.Q: Transmit SMS message from NFC to iPhone app I am developing an NFC application which should transmit an SMS message to the user's iPhone. I was wondering if I could use the ba244e880a
