The term "structural heart disease" refers to a cluster of disorders of cardiac muscle that have, in common, the characteristic of enlargement and the potential of causing symptoms. Most of these disorders are characterized by an asynchronous, compensatory change in the size of a heart that is often subjected to hemodynamic demands that require a larger myocardial mass. The pathway of causation of this group of disorders is multifactorial. Some evidence suggests an inherited component. Although most cases are of unknown etiology, the potential role of cardiotoxic drugs and viruses is being explored.Now Playing: Arkansas man gets life in prison for shooting suspected drug dealer Now Playing: Anthony Bourdain on identity: 'Me, too' Now Playing: Food network host, chef Anthony Bourdain found dead in Paris Now Playing: Suspected shooter in Paris terror attack watched 'jihadist propaganda' Now Playing: Why do some
