Flame Dash: The Movie
Flame Dash: The Movie is a 2011 science fiction action comedy film directed and written by Brandt Peterson and starring Suzanne Eaton and Nick Courtney. The film is about a young blind woman who develops a power to draw flame from her fingers. The film was shot in seven days on location in West Texas and in Los Angeles. The title of the film was a reference to the exclamation sometimes used by the protagonist of the titular character Flamingos that originated on the television show. The film was a co-production between the United States and the United Kingdom, and was released through Lionsgate. Plot An unnamed woman is shown with her hand over her eyes. She is walking alongside her friend, a self-proclaimed expert on the criminal underworld, out to the location of an arms sale. The two approach a tent with a number of crates in it. This is revealed to be the location of the arms deal. The woman says that she is blind. Her father was a test pilot, and since she was born blind she has always been able to use her other senses, especially hearing, to compensate. As she turns around, she touches the tips of her fingers to a laptop. The screen displays the words "Blind Woman in Texas." The woman and her friend return to town and put up flyers. A blind person is seen reading one of them. A man with a fake eye takes the flyer and flees. A man calling himself the Great Detective goes to a website where he can join in a city-wide reward for information regarding the flyer. The day after the flyer man was taken in, a violent fire fight ensues in the town. The Great Detective and the woman show up, and at first the two are very antagonistic towards each other but then they start to become friendly. The Great Detective takes the flyer back to his group. The next day, the woman and the Great Detective are seen at the arms exchange. The Great Detective has changed to a pair of sunglasses, which he took from the flyer man. The woman is shown reading the flyer. A train stops at an empty train yard. The woman reads the flyer, which says that the arms are for an important public official and that the location was set up by a man who was involved with the arms deal. The woman and the Great Detective go to the location. The girl and her friend have an argument while the girl is
