Specific binding of cadmium (Cd(II)) to the surface of encephalomyocarditis virus (EMCV) may interrupt the biological effects of the virus. The effect on EMCV transcription and replication was therefore investigated in detail using a series of Cd(II) -binding buffers. Among the conditions studied, the specific binding of Cd(II) enhanced the inhibitory effect of the virus on the transcription of the EMCV-encoded RNA genome. The level of mature viral RNA synthesis was enhanced to greater than two-fold at a 100-fold molar excess of Cd(II), and the half-maximal inhibitory dose of the virus was reduced by 50% from  $1.13 \times 10^{-8}$  M to  $5.85 \times 10^{-10}$  M. The inhibitory effect of the virus was restored by the addition of EDTA-2Na and Zn(II). In contrast, the addition of Cd(II) enhanced the infectivity of the virus. EMCV viral RNA replication was examined in the presence and absence of Cd(II) using an antiserum 570a42141b
