The study evaluates the impact of medical insurance design and delivery on the quantity and quality of physician visits. Estimates are made for New Jersey and New York. The study shows that delivering insurance by contractual arrangements rather than by fee-for-service can help explain an increase in volume of physician visits. The impact of delivery arrangements, however, is not strong. When these arrangements are delivered by multispecialty groups with well-organized systems of care delivery, the impact on the quantity and quality of physician visits is strongest.Downtown Denver: Fat City to Fit City I will be doing four presentations at the Summit on Sustainable Communities in Denver, August 18-21.
