News on Pakistan's ongoing socio-economic, political and military situation and foreign policy.
Thursday, July 26, 2007 Can Pakistan walk before it starts? [This is a reform of an earlier post dated 20 July 2007 - the words 'Pakistan walk before they start' have now been replaced by 'Walking before they start'. It is well worth reading for its own sake. The original phrase came from an article in the Sunday Times of 18 July 2007, written by Michael Evans. That edition is no longer available on the Sunday Times website, but the article is reproduced in full below, with thanks to East London Advertiser for alerting me to this.] Pakistan walk before they start By Michael Evans Pakistan may not be ready to launch a two-front fight against a resurgent India, but they will do so sooner or later. Pakistan's military leaders know that they can't afford to lose the Taliban and India, and that they have to maintain close relations with powerful ally America. But the Pakistani public – who benefit from the US-led war on terror – don't like the military taking on their Indian neighbour. The Pakistani media, too, have largely ignored the festering Afghan-Indian border dispute, focused as it is on a war being fought further away. There's also a perception that India is too weak, and will fold if given a chance. Pakistan also needs the key economic revenue they get from trade with India, the second-largest economic power in Asia. The fight with India and the Afghan Taliban will test Pakistan's ability to balance the support they get from powerful neighbour India and the US, and the pressure they put on the Taliban. Afghanistan is also almost a remote issue. In the case of an all-out civil war with the Taliban, Pakistan could choose to side with President Karzai – an Indian ally – or the Afghan Taliban, if they choose. Experts who follow Pakistan's politics believe the country is close to the point of making a hard decision. "What we have seen in the last week or so is the thin edge of the wedge," says Zahir Shah, director of the South Asia Institute, in Kuala Lumpur. "It is a combination of the by-election, the Pervez Musharraf coup and What Is The Allergic Reactions Following Injection Of An Epinephrine Nasal Spray? An Epinephrine nasal spray is used as a treatment for a person with an anaphylactic reaction. Anaphylactic shock is an acute allergic reaction. Anaphylactic shock is a severe, potentially life-threatening allergic reaction. This reaction is caused by the introduction of any substance into the body through the skin. An anaphylactic reaction is very fast and should be treated immediately with intramuscular epinephrine. You should not use an Epinephrine nasal spray if you are unsure how your body reacts to it. Causes of an Anaphylactic Reaction The causes of anaphylaxis can be broken down into three main types. These are Type 1 food allergy is an immediate type of food allergy. The symptoms of type 1 allergy start immediately and last for more than 15 minutes. Type 1 allergic reactions have the following symptoms: • Itchy throat • Red, irritated eyes • Common cold symptoms of stuffy nose and coughing • Choking, coughing, wheezing and shortness of breath • Swelling of the face, tongue and lips • Extremely fast heart rate, and • The feeling of fainting • Low blood pressure • Lightheadedness

Food allergies are more common in children. Allergens have changed over time. In the 20th century, egg allergy became more common in children, but these allergies are less common now. Food allergies have also become more common in infants in the 21st century. Type 2 allergies are allergic reactions that occur after exposure to something for more than 15 minutes. This includes the following: • Stinging insect bites • Flowers or plant pollen (seasonal allergies) • Cutting a finger • Antibiotic • Birth control pill • Environmental conditions

Type 3 allergy are reactions to inhalation. The main cause of this type of allergy is to bee stings. The symptoms of type 3 allergy last for more than 15 minutes: • • Chest tightness • Tightness in the throat • Aggressive behavior • Itching and hives • Itching • Sneezing • Shortness of breath • Nausea • Headache
