Elements: Like its cousin, InDesign, this graphics app places the emphasis on design. As with InDesign, it works with both the InDesign format (DID) and the native PDF formats. Adobe makes Elements primarily as a vector-based design and drawing application, although it does make the occasional raster image. Elements is available for Apple products and Windows computers. It doesn't work with the Microsoft Office 2007 apps discussed in Chapter 18. Illustrator: This product was originally released as Mac only, but it has become a cross-platform format. It supports all the basic features and tools that any skilled illustrator should need to design and create images. Figure 2-2 shows a design made in Illustrator, including text, vector shapes, and raster art. FIGURE 2-2: An image with a background layer; blend modes; and a text layer. Flash: This program is the cross-platform solution for creating and delivering Flash animations. It supports Macs and Windows computers, and you can export images, colors, vectors, and imported images directly to GIF files. It's good at creating Flash animations and may be useful for those who want to create GIF animations. Check out the online version of this book at www.apress.com.

The screenshots below show features in the Elements version of Photoshop. There are a few features in Elements that are not available in Photoshop, and they are shown in the second column. An example of each of the features is shown in the final column. These features are not included in Photoshop Elements Pro but are only available in Photoshop or Adobe Photoshop CC. For the full range of Photoshop features and Elements features, see Photoshop vs Elements When should you use Photoshop Elements? Adobe Photoshop is for professional photographers who need to retouch their images. It has a lot of features to make it easier to edit images, but if you want a simple workflow, Photoshop Elements is the program for you. Photoshop Elements is an alternative to Photoshop, so you can use it when you want. What features are included in Photoshop Elements? The graphics editing features in Photoshop Elements are similar to traditional Elements, so you can use the program to edit images of any size. Also, when you start a project with Elements, you will end up with a smaller file size than with Photoshop. This will give you more flexibility when you edit and transfer your images. However, there is no colour management, so you will not get the best possible images. Elements also has limited photo editing options. You have the ability to adjust brightness, contrast, hue, and saturation. However, you cannot use any adjustments to adjust the colours in your image, so your final image will always look the same, even if the original image was very different. The following chart shows the similarities between Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. Photoshop vs Photoshop Elements When should you use Photoshop Elements? If you want to edit images with basic features and don't need any of the advanced features of Photoshop, use Photoshop Elements. If you have an older computer or don't need high quality images, Photoshop Elements will be more efficient for you. You will be able to edit your images quickly and have smaller file sizes. Elements vs Photoshop for photo editing When should you use Photoshop Elements? If you need more photo editing capabilities than Elements has, use Photoshop. Elements is great for basic photo editing. It is a simple program with fewer features than Photoshop. However, Photoshop has a lot more features and a simplified user interface. It is better for professionals and hobbyists who need more advanced photo editing options than Elements has. Elements has higher file sizes than Photoshop a681f4349e

Q: Fabricjs - How do I change the fill color for a path object? I am trying to get this yellow triangle to be the correct color. I don't understand how to change the path object color using fabric.js, only the fill color of the element. I am trying to combine the shape from here: with the functions from here: I have pieced together from several samples. I tried this which produced this: Here is my code: `var element = fabric.document.getElementById("arc"); fabric.Object.prototype.fillColor = "#FFFFFF"; fabric.loadSVGFromString(element.getAttribute("data-user-id"), function(objects, loaded){ var output = []; var path; var rect; var points; for(var key in objects) { path = objects[key].path; rect = new fabric.Rect({left: objects[key].left, top: objects[key].top, width:objects[key].width, height: objects[key].height, fill: 'green', selectable: false, originX: 'center', originY: 'center', hasControls: false}); points = path.getBoundingRect().getCoords(); for (var i=0; i`
