The Arabidopsis BRC1 (BARD1) kinase and human BRCT1 (BRCA1 C-terminal-binding protein) are involved in the DNA damage response and apoptosis. In the present work we have tested the hypothesis that BRC1 has a functional role in cell cycle regulation. BRC1 accumulation was found to increase during cell cycle progression with maximum levels of accumulation in G2 phase. Also, BRC1 overproduction was shown to inhibit the effects of both the anti-microtubule agent colcemid and of the cytokinin benzo(a)pyrene. We propose that BRC1 participates in a pathway that regulates cell cycle progression in the absence of auxin, and we suggest that inhibition of microtubule dynamics by anti-microtubule agents may lead to accumulation of BRC1.1.
